the 22,000-rider Milwaukee railroad, a commuter line serving Chicago, from collapse. The 800,000-rider Chicago Transit Authority system, after receiving emergency state aid, has enough funds to operate only through the end of June.

o Riders on New York City's subways are threatened with the second fare hike in two years, while malfunctioning cars, fires, delays and accidents on the extensive but antiquated system mount.

o All around the country, schools are closing, teachers are victims of layoffs and educational programs — even sports and music — are being eliminated. Teacher layoffs are no longer sparing those educators with tenure.

A study prepared by the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, and based on a survey of 275 cities with population of over 10,000 in every part of the country, shows the extent of the cities' fiscal woes.

More than half the cities surveyed saw municipal budget deficits in both 1979 and 1980. Over 70 percent of the largest cities were in deficit in 1980. All but four of the largest cities expect deficits in 1981.

U.S. cities are "on the brink of fiscal collapse," the study concludes, and with the coming cuts in federal aid, "the outlook for the cities is bleak."

The cuts pushed through Congress by the Reagan Administration are massive. They include:

Many mayors and municipal commissioners warn that the cities' needs will be neglected if federal block grants are routed to the states instead of directly to the cities. Said Richmond, Va. Mayor Henry Marsh: "The states have not had the kind of concern needed for central cities."

The federal government may have to develop a policy for dealing with a succession of city defaults, the Congressional study warns.

The study also predicts that, as a result of the Reagan cuts, cities will have to "require further increases in local taxes, user charges and fees" of city populations already overtaxed and overcharged for declining services. Such a move, the study points out, could very likely drive more people out of the cities, further weakening their tax base.

CUT TO THE BONE

City services, cut to the bone in many cases already, can't be reduced much more. Whatever fat there may be in some city offices, there is little in the wages of municipal workers. The congressional study notes that "wage and salary increases for police, fire and sanitation workers were frequently below the rate of inflation; in the largest cities, the shortfall was dramatic."

"We're convinced that there's no way to bring Detroit back to long-run solvency through just more efficiencies, or just through wage freezes, or even a combination of the two," Fred Secrest, an advisor to Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, has decided.

ministration is trying to abolish whole agencies; in other cases it is appointing new agency chiefs who abhor the very department they head up and will work to undermine its purpose.

Gang Up on Consumers

Among other things, the Reagan administration would like to:

- Relax or eliminate 34 auto safety and air pollution regulations; something that the auto industry has been demanding for years. Any proclaimed savings to new car buyers would be fully offset by recent price boosts by the auto corporations.

- Immediately cut 30 percent from the Consumer Product Safety Commission budget and eventually abolish the whole agency. This agency is responsible for protecting consumers from hazards in household products ranging from baby cribs to insulation.

The Reagan contention is that the product safety commission ing we need to get rid of an agency that does often challenge the corporate "right" to monopolize and control industry at the expense of the public. What we really need is a FTC to go after the big corporations that dominate our lives.

These are just a few examples of the Reagan administration attacks on consumer protection programs. The Alert Consumer will occasionally report on the government-corporate attempts to undermine and destroy consumer protections won over the years.

The 1982 budget would cut public works by 40 percent, leaving only $1 million for street repairs and all other services, after providing for rubbish collection and street lighting.

• When a library in Camden, N.J. burnt down last year, the city decided to use the insurance money for current operating costs, rather than rebuild. The municipal government in this city of 85,000 plans to slash services by 42 percent to reduce a growing budget deficit.

The reduction in city services will include cuts in fire and police protection, despite soaring crime rates and an arson problem.

• Although Houston's rapid growth has brought prosperity to developers, basic city services are woefully deficient. Garbage collection is sometimes days late. The inadequate city services hurt those without the oil or real estate millions to buy their amenities: workers, the poor and the elderly. Many of the hundreds of thousands of poor Houston residents are stuck in low-wage, non-union jobs.

• Only a court order has temporarily saved

The phaseout of CETA and youth jobs programs, a loss of over 700,000 jobs; cuts in food stamps, ending food stamps for 400,000 households; slashes in child nutrition programs eliminating benefits for 14.5 million children; reductions in the Special Supplemental Food Program, cutting off aid to 700,000 pregnant women and small children; and the decline in funds for federally-assisted housing, eliminating 90,000 public housing units and slashing maintenance at the remaining units.

BIGGER BURDEN, LESS AID

The cities, already cutting back basic public services, will not be able to absorb the cost of these programs. Nor will they be able to pay for the increased costs of not having such programs — a larger welfare burden, higher health costs, increased crime.

What's more, the Reagan cutbacks will mean a direct loss of municipal revenue. The 36 largest cities participating in the survey reported that 32 cents out of every dollar in their budgets comes from federal and state assistance.

Federal money that has come to cities earmarked for spending on specific categories of needs will now be merged into a few large block grants funneled to the states. The total amount spent on the grants, in addition, will be cut by an estimated 25 percent.

The congressional study expects that in the face of decreasing federal aid for capital purposes, capital spending plans will increasingly rely on access to the credit markets, which will mean more raids on municipal treasuries by banks in exchange for a quick fiscal fix. Through high interest rates and speculation in municipal bonds, banks have already had a leading role in bringing cities to the brink.

Evidence points to the conclusion that the economic and social problems strangling the cities cannot be solved by the cities alone, or any one city alone. The problems are national — inflation, unemployment, plant closings, racism and other ills don't stop at the boundaries of Detroit, Los Angeles, New York or Houston.

Reducing the military budget to a level realistically needed for defense, and transferring these funds to programs that will rebuild the cities, would both curb the terrible increases in the cost of living and pull the cities back from the brink.

Adoption of the tax program advocated by UE could create adequate budgets for city, state, and federal governments while relieving the burden on working people, closing loopholes for corporations, the rich and speculators; shifting the tax burden from small property and homeowners to the large owner, large landlords and corporations.

WFO is carrying this under dual caption as both investigations deal with threats against Congressman LATTA.

For information of the file, on 7/28/81, [redacted] C&P Telephone Company, contacted writer regarding a call he had just previously received from Congressman LATTA. He advised that Congressman LATTA questioned him regarding C&P's ability to trace incoming phone calls in this area. [redacted] stated that he advised Congressman LATTA that C&P's ability to trace calls in this area was limited because of their use of electronic switch equipment. He advised that if a trace was placed on the Congressman's 225 exchange, the following would be possible:

If an incoming call was made from out of the local Maryland, Virginia, D.C. area, not only could a trace not be made, C&P would not even be able to identify the state the call was made from. If an incoming call was made from the local Maryland and Virginia area, they would be able to identify the area, i.e., Fairfax, Bethesda, and Arlington. Once the local area had been identified, computers in that area could be programmed to pick up a second incoming call. Lastly, if the incoming call was made from a 225 exchange, C&P would be able to give the exact number.

In view of the above limited service that the C&P Telephone Company could provide, it does not appear at this time to be feasible to attach a tracing device to the Congressman's phone.

- An agenda for Psychological Warfare
(the basis for a stunning Psychological Victory for the USA?)

U.S. Senator, Rudy Boschwitz

1982 JAN 12 AM 10:04

POLAND: CRISIS MANAGEMENT?

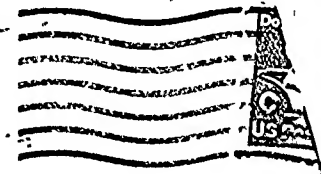

Scenario: The United States grants political recognition to "Solidarity" as being the actual political representative body of the People of Poland, (born of Democratic Principles) and the de-facto government of "The People" of "Poland"! And also claim that the existing Communist government is an outlaw force, and a Stalinist entity artificially and militarily imposed and fastened on the back of the Polish People by the Drakonian Soviet Union! The existing government are not a government of an Independent Poland, but they are in fact henchmen and lackies of the Soviet Union Quislings and Soviet surrogates who have fastened a Soviet Yoke of Imperialistic Soviet Domination and enslavement that denies the people of Poland the Right of "Self Determination"!

This is a Scenario for a stunning Psychological Victory for the United States of America, that would discredit the existing Communist government of Poland, and elevate the status of "Solidarity"! Perhaps the United States Ambassador to the United Nations could read our Declaration on Poland (Polska), to the whole World before the United Nations General Assembly, (the Soviets will be ~~psychologically~~ psychologically devastated)!

I have conceived of and studied this plan and have found the rationale and the psychology of it to be sound, with the psychological and Political impact to be tremendous! We must be willing and daring enough to implement this plan!

Sincerely,

U.S. Senator, Rudy Boschwitz
United States Senate
Washington, D.C.
